

VALE EXPLORERS FIND LOST CITIES

Party Returns From Peru Entirely Satisfied With Expedition.

New York, December 22.—Dr. Hiram Bingham, assistant professor of Latin American history in Yale University, who set out in June to find lost cities of the pre-Inca period in Peru, returned yesterday by the United Fruit liner Metapala quite satisfied with the results of his expedition. With him were Professor Susan Bowman, geologist, Kai Hirschman, topographer, and H. L. Tucker, archaeologist-geologist.

The expedition found one of the lost cities covered with a corn field on a plateau about 2,000 feet above the valley of the River Urubamba. The explorers were attracted to the plateau by Indians, who told them of marble ruins there. A goat path led from the valley to the plateau, which was almost surrounded by precipitous rocks. Professor Bingham said:

"We found ruins of buildings almost perfectly intact. The white granite, the Spanish despoilers could not take. Some still more than ten feet above ground. We were the first white men, I fancy, that had ever seen this city since the time of Pizarro, 160 years ago. The stones of the houses were beautifully joined and the cutting was perfect. The buildings were made without mortar. The foundations were very large, some being eight feet wide, six feet deep and twelve feet long. We could not bring any of the specimens with us, as the Peruvian government will not let any of the ruins be taken from the country."

"The city is called by the natives Machu Pichu. The pre-Inca remains are much more interesting and denote a higher condition of civilization than the Inca relics. No marble could be more exquisitely cut. We believe that this city is that mentioned by the Peruvian explorer, Sir Clements Robert Markham, as the 'hill of the three windowed temples.' The temples were three-windowed. The stones were carved in the Egyptian style. As to whether or not they were built by races originally from the Far East, I cannot say. Our object in going to Peru was to find facts. We have nothing to do with theories. We have learned that the workmanship of these three pre-Inca peoples, preceding those whom Pizarro conquered, excelled in beauty the work of the Incas of Pizarro's time. They had been in this plateau region we cannot say. Our work has been purely one of exploration. We leave the speculative archaeologist to pronounce on the antiquity of Peruvian civilization." Professor Bingham said the corn fields seemed to know little about the temples around which they had planted their crops. The ground was fruitful and they utilized it. They were of a different breed from the men who built the temples and had only dim traditions concerning them.

The expedition, fitted out by Yale entirely, made maps of territory along the seventy-third meridian along the Tumbes River to the coast. Most of the region had not been mapped. Possibilities of rare fossils were discovered near Cuzco. Coastal terraces along the Pacific hitherto supposed to be of simple history, were found to be complex. It was proved by fossil remains that the coastal region had been submerged and ruled several times in the remote past.

One of the accomplishments of the expedition was the ascent of the summit of Coropuna, the second highest mountain in South America. Only two men of the expedition, Professor Bingham and H. L. Tucker, got to the top, which, indicated by their barometers, was 22,500 feet above sea level. They took measurements by triangulation, the figures of which will be made known later, to prove the barometric records. The ascent was completed on October 15. The intention had been to cover 2,000 feet a day, but the climbers found that they were not equal to the task. They did average 1,800 feet from the timber line, where the real climbing practically began, and they completed the job in six days. "We were practically without food," Professor Bingham said, "living entirely on tea. Ordinary food nauseated us. It was very much as if we were suffering from seasickness. We had difficulty in breathing and sleeping also. We had taken no sleeping along, but it was not necessary to use them. We were cramps instead."

"We learned later that Miss Annie Peck had made a rapid climb of two peaks of the Coropuna. They were not the highest peaks, however, and she made it during the winter. We were at the absolute summit of the volcano. We found out by leveling that we were higher than any of the peaks. We were right on the verge of the crater, which was clogged with ice and snow. The mountain is twelve miles long and had several peaks. No one so far as we could learn, had ever gone to the top before."

Professor Bingham said the ruins of the Inca period that the expedition had discovered were abundant and on a par in archaeological value with many others that were well known, but were much inferior to the pre-Inca ruins, especially those of the 'hill of the three windowed temples.'

HYDROPHOBIA KILLS CHEMIST.

Dr. John R. Bell, bitten by Dog Five last week, died at 11 o'clock yesterday. Dr. John R. Bell, leading chemist at the chemical plant of Roessler & Hasselcher, of Perth Amboy, New Jersey, and a nephew of Dr. H. H. Schaff, quarantine officer at the United States phobia hospital here, died here on November 13 by a dog owned by the local health commissioner, Leo Schwartz.

The dog's head was sent to Trenton for examination, but no trace of rabies was found. Dr. Bell continued in his usual good health until late on Wednesday night, when he showed signs of hydrophobia. He died, growling and snapping like a dog, with four men holding him down in his last convulsions.

Dr. Bell was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and had been connected with the chemical firm ever since his graduation last spring. He was twenty-three years old.

RAISE POSTAL DEPOSIT LIMIT.

Depositors Will Soon Be Allowed to Exceed the $500 Mark. Washington, December 22.—The $500 limit of postal savings bank deposits will be removed, according to state-ments at the Post-Office Department. This limit, which has been reached by many depositors, and the bank trustees have been urged to permit deposits without any limitation whatever, and the Post-Office Department is considering the matter.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock yesterday received petitions from several national banks in various parts of the country requesting the trustees to increase their deposit limits. In informal discussions with bankers Mr. Hitchcock has become convinced that they now realize that the postal savings system is not seriously inimical to their interests.
